1) I do not understand why a report is necessary before deciding the general question. The Applicant wishes to enhance his sales by promoting a return of part of the profits to his customers, the recipients being chosen by lot. As the lottery is only a subordinate part and no money is separately collected for its purpose, I am inclined to think that this does not fall under the prohibition contained in the Penal Code. Please search for precedents & authorities & let me have a note on the question.

Cs File No. 123 of 1913-14

Serial No.

Since 1904 no case seems to have come up to Govt in which permission to hold such lotteries was sought for. The Genl Records also state that there are no precedents relating to the subject.'

Attention is respectfully invited to the case of Taylor vs Smetten mentioned in the Mayne's Commentary to Sec 294 A of the Penal Code. In that case quite a similar transaction was held to be a lottery.

KG.- 116
11/11/13 VRK.

Technically, the transaction in question appears to be a lottery. A lottery has been defined to be a scheme for distributing prizes by lot or chance. A transaction does not lose its character of lottery merely because it is coupled with another transaction which is, each of the nature of an ordinary sale. It does not matter at all that those who take part in it obtain some or even full value for their subscriptions & this last circumstance does not prevent the scheme from being a lottery. The essential point is that the distribution of prizes must depend wholly upon chance & does not involve any skill.

This is the English law as laid down in the leading case of Taylor v Smetten. (11 Q B D). In this case, a merchant sold packets of tea, each packet (it is important to note this) containing some prize or other. It was admitted that the tea was good enough & the price. But it was held that it was a lottery on the ground that customers purchased the tea coupled with the chance of getting a prize without the least idea of what that prize might be. This case was followed & applied in Barclay v Pearson which related to the common 'missing word Competition' of the newspapers.

These cases were no doubt decided under a special English Statute; but this in no way differs in substance from the provn of the Penal Code.

In the particular case now in question, the prizes are to be given to the "first five tickets that will be drawn by lot". It is not even that every purchaser will get a prize, as in the English case quoted above; but only five prizes will be awarded. The essential element of distribution, by lot, of prizes is present; and, however bona fide the transaction may be, this constitutes it into a lottery.

As the transaction was prima facie, held to be a lottery, a report was suggested to be called for from the Dt. Magte regarding the applicants' bona fides, before granting sanction.

Dr Secy

The lottery is only a subordinate part of the entire transaction as shown in the 1st Communication Noted above. The only point for consideration therefore, is whether Govt. should or should not authorize it. There does not seem to exist any objection on ground of public policy against sanctioning this transaction if the customers get goods for the value of the purchase-money paid by them. on this point there is only the assurance of the proposer; but it is not

The Revenue and General Secretary,

K.B. Puttappa. ..... Petitioner.

The petitioner abovenamed respectfully begs to state as follows:-

1. The petitioner is the owner of a Shop in Chickpet, Bangalore City, in which he has been carrying on business for several years past as a Cloth & General Merchant, under the name of K.B.Puttappa and Brothers.

2. The petitioner has arranged for a sale of the goods of his shop to be commenced on 1-11-1913.

3. Though in the proposed sale the petitioner offers to his customers goods of the value of the purchase money, he also proposes as an additional inducement to his customers and with a view to popularise his sale, to give away five prizes of the value of Rs.600/-.

4. The terms and conditions for the giving away of the said prizes are to be found in the copy of the notice herewith filed.

5. The proposed Five Prizes will be awarded to the owners of the first five tickets that will be drawn by lot by the petitioner in the presence of disinterested and respectable gentlemen on a date to be fixed and notified hereafter.

6. Sales of an exactly similar nature are being held almost every year both in the City as well as in the C. & M. Station, Bangalore, by some of the most leading Firms of Bangalore.

7. As however the sale which the petitioner proposes to hold may be hereafter objected to, probably on the ground that it amounts to an unauthorised lottery,- the petitioner has thought it expedient to make this application.

8. The petitioner therefore respectfully prays that sanction may kindly be granted permitting him to carry on the proposed sale from the 1st of November. The petitioner further prays that early orders may be - kindly passed granting his application as he is anxious to advertise and notify to his numerous customers in - Bangalore and in the out-stations that the sale commences from 1-11-1913.
